The NV Porto Reserva Tawny is a blend of older and younger wines with an average age of around six years. It aged in very old oak casks and is bottled to order. Like with the white, I found some oaky notes and a faint touch of varnish. Other than that, it has textbook descriptors of the style, nuts, honey and a touch of caramel. It was produced with field blends of over 30 varieties and made in the traditional way. It has 20% alcohol and 100 grams of sugar. This was tasted as an unbottled sample.
