The white 2020 Trepadell was produced with grapes from very old vines on white soils. Trepadell is an obscure local grape that has large clusters and thin skins. It was picked early but fermented at a slightly higher temperature to have a faster fermentation to avoid having malolactic and alcoholic fermentations happening at the same time, which produced a reduction in the wines. It has 12.32% alcohol and good freshness. They had a larger crop, so they had to buy and use a new barrel (out of three) for the élevage with lees. There is some creaminess, but the wine has freshness and balance to compensate and comes through as medium-bodied and tasty, with notes of yellow flowers and pollen and a chalky, dry texture and dry finish. 923 bottles and 18 magnums were filled in February 2021.
